

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides a method and apparatus of revealing previously hidden indicia associated with selectable objects on a separate display image upon completion of a selection game. The selected objects and associated indicia are displayed as an identifiable group and the unselected objects and associated indicia are presented as another identifiable group. The indicia are indicative of an award, an end bonus marker, or a trigger for another game feature.